County Splits Summary

The State of California's 2011 Senate District plan splits eleven of the 49 counties that were small enough to have been wholly included in a single district. The plan splits ten of the eleven counties between two different districts and one of the eleven counties between three districts.

There are 58 counties in the State of California. 49 counties had a 2010 U.S. Census population that was small enough to have been included in a single Senate district without exceeding the district's ideal 2010 population. The ideal 2010 Senate District population is 931,349. This number was determined by dividing the 2010 population of the State of California by the total number of State Senate Districts.

There are nine counties with 2010 populations that were larger than a single 2011 Senate district and therefore had to be split between two or more districts. These counties include Alameda, Contra Costa, Los Angeles, Orange, Riverside, Sacramento, San Bernardino, San Diego and Santa Clara.

Counties with Populations Greater than a Single Senate District:

County	2010 PL-94 Population	Number of Senate Districts Based on 2010 Population
Alameda	1,510,271	1.62
Contra Costa	1,049,025	1.13
Los Angeles	9,818,605	10.54

Santa Clara	1,781,642	1.91

City Splits Summary

The State of California's 2011 Senate District plan splits twenty cities that were small enough to have been wholly included in a single district. Eight-teen cities are split between two different districts and two cities are split between three different Senate districts. These numbers also do not include zero population splits.

There are 480 recognized cities in the State of California. 477 cities had 2010 PL-94 populations that were small enough to have been included in a single Senate district without exceeding the district's ideal population. This number does not include non-city entities such as Census Designated Places and neighborhoods. There are three cities with populations greater than a single Senate District include Los Angeles, San Diego and San Jose.
