

PREFACE

The January 1972 Report of Registration, prepared under authority of Section 6460 of the California Elections Code, shows voter registration at the beginning of the presidential election year.

Congressional district voter registration information in this Report is for the 38 districts in existence at the time registration data was transmitted to the Secretary of State. On January 18, 1972, the California Supreme Court ordered a new congressional redistricting plan apportioning the state into 43 congressional districts. Registration data for these districts will appear in the April 1972 Report of Registration.

A brief analytical section has been included in this Report to provide a more complete view of the state's registration patterns.

Secretary of State

Table I shows current voter registration in California. Figure I (page 4) gives the number of voters in each of the qualified political parties or other voter categories as of January 1972 and in each of the preceding ten years. Figure II (page 5) shows the same information expressed in percentages.

Figure II shows that the vast majority of California voters have remained affiliated with the Democratic and Republican parties. Both parties, however, are slightly below their average since 1962 for January Reports of Registration. Currently, the Republican party is 1.7 percent under its 11-year average of 40.5 percent of total registration. The Democratic party is off .3 percent from its average of 55.5 percent. Democratic registration is 2.5 percent under its high point of 57.7 percent achieved in 1966 while Republican registration is down 3.6 percent from its high point of 42.4 percent reached in 1967.

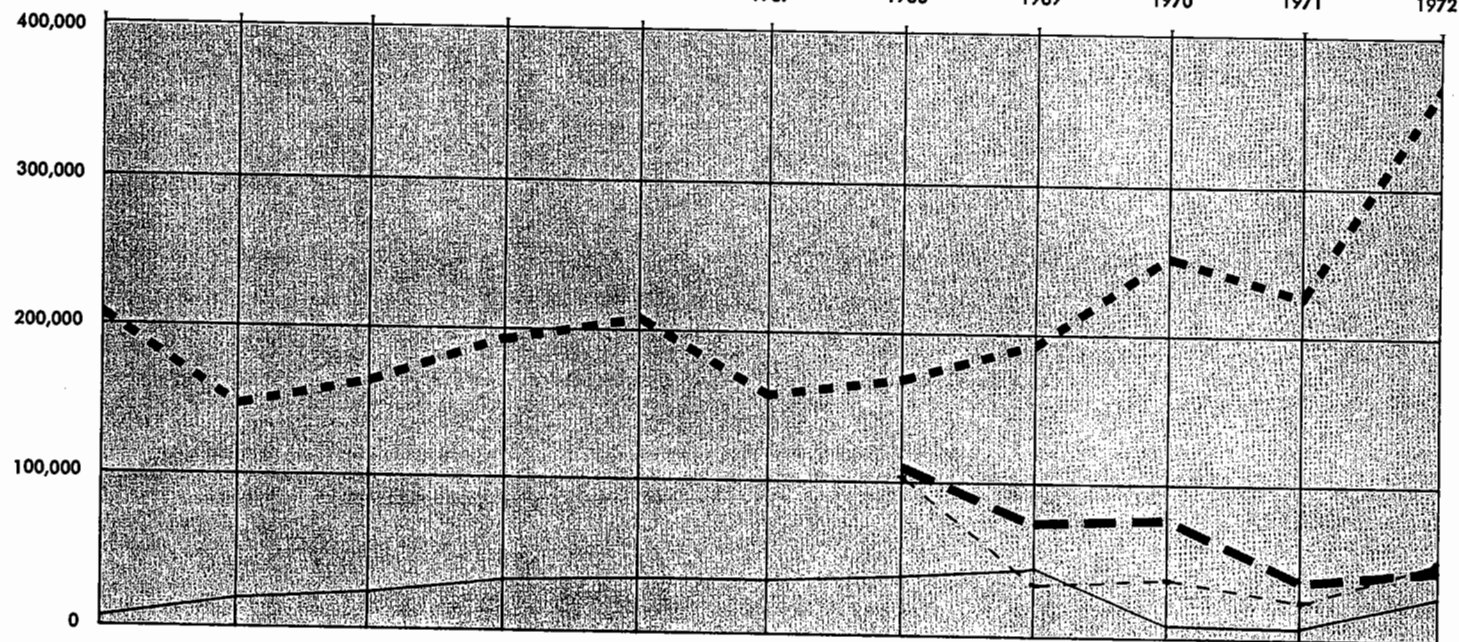

Voters affiliated with smaller parties or who have registered as declined-to-state have increased to 5.9 percent of the total registration. 20,543 registrants have affiliated with the La Raza Unida Party. This represents ¼ of 1 percent of the total electorate and falls short of the 66,334 registrants needed to become a qualified political party for this year's ballot.

Table II shows current voter registration as a percentage of the total population 18 years old and older. The variations from county to county reflect demographic and socio-economic differences as well as the availability of deputy registrars of voters.

* Population data: U.S. census.

** Registration near or over 100% may be due to an undercount by the census in remote mountain areas.

Figure III shows that the current percentage of the state's eligible population registered to vote is lower than it was in January 1962. Part of this drop can be explained, however, by the addition in 1971 of nearly 1.1 million 18 through 20 year olds to the total of those eligible to vote.

Aspects of the youth vote are described in Tables III, IV and V. Table III (page 7) shows the party registration of 18 through 20 year olds as of July 1, 1971 in 14 counties. Separate files for these youthful voters are now maintained only in Sacramento and San Diego Counties. Table IV (page 7) shows the distribution of these voters in the two counties by the various partisan and nonpartisan categories. Table V (page 7) indicates the percentage of 18 through 20 year olds registered to vote in these two counties. Although these data are not conclusive, they suggest that the statewide registration of 18 through 20 year olds lags behind the average for all voters.
